There was some excessive highlighting and writing in it...but overall I am extremely pleased with the product. I would shop from this vendor again.1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Excellent career counseling book.By A CustomerThis book applies classic counseling theories for use in career counseling. It is an interesting and innovative look at this often neglected area of counseling.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. InformativeBy A CustomerOutstanding piece of work. The author really did his homework. It is about time an in-depth book was written about career counseling.

This breakthrough book helps readers see how career development is an important aspect of individual, group, and family therapy, especially today, with the fundamental changes in family relationships that have taken place as a result of the ever-growing diversity of today's working population. Unique in its coverage of diverse settings, the book is organized by age. Each model has been used with the specific age population under consideration. Each chapter is written to be put to direct use in a particular setting where career counseling can be incorporated as part of the service or education being offered. (Contributors have developed or have extensively used each suggested intervention.)

"This book contains the perspectives and experiences of many writers and will be of value to students and practitioners alike. A point of departure for students to move beyond theory." "An excellent resource for students providing in-depth conversation beyond what one would find in a career theories book. An excellent resource for counselors working with diverse populations . . . well written . . . topics covered in appropriate detail." "A compendium of models of career development for a variety of audiences . . . covers the lifespan well. . . . A wide variety of settings are included." About the Author Nadene Peterson is a professor at Our Lady of the Lake and Roberto Cortez Gonzalez is a professor at The University of Texas at El Paso. They are both active members in ACA and APA and the career divisions within each organization. Both present regularly in regional, national and international forums and are becoming known as authorities on career counseling.
